Our Story

Globex Toys began in 1987 as a small woodworking workshop producing wooden building blocks for local kindergartens. Over the following decade the company expanded into board games, and in the early 2000s added its Outdoor Play Equipment line, drawing on the same timber expertise. The Educational Computer Games division was launched in 2016, initially as a side project by two employees experimenting with simple learning apps for tablets — it now accounts for a fast-growing share of the business. Globex Toys has exhibited at the Nuremberg International Toy Fair (Spielwarenmesse) every year since 1991, and won the regional “Handwerk & Innovation” award in 2021 for its FSC-certified outdoor play range.

Product Lines

Board Games

Classic and modern tabletop games for family and hobbyist audiences, including the long-running “Waldgeister” series, one of the best-selling German-language board games of the past decade.

Outdoor Play Equipment

Swing sets, climbing frames and playhouses, built from FSC-certified European timber; sold primarily to municipalities, schools and retail garden centers across Germany, Austria and increasingly Canada.

Educational Computer Games

Interactive learning software and hardware kits for children aged 5–12, combining physical play pieces with a companion app. The fastest-growing of the three product lines.

Growing Internationally

Globex Toys has expanded steadily beyond its German home market over the past years. Export markets today include Austria, Switzerland, the Benelux countries and the United Kingdom, with Canada emerging as one of the fastest-growing international markets following a partnership with a major Canadian toy retailer signed in 2023.

Sustainability

All timber used across the Outdoor Play Equipment and Board Games lines is FSC-certified and sourced from European forests. Packaging across all three product lines has been fully plastic-free since 2022.
