Dear Ms. Schneider,

thank you for your message – as thorough as one would expect from a company of your size. I took the time you evidently took as well, and have arrived at some clear conclusions.

With our collaboration now intensifying, we're glad to take on the role of your central banking relationship – that's simply the natural consequence of relying on us. And it shows: since fiscal year 2022, your total revenue has grown by roughly a third, a development that speaks for itself. Particularly notable is your Canada business, whose share of your total currency risk has more than doubled since 2023. As a result, your Canadian business now also accounts for a larger share of your currency risk than your UK business does, and we should prepare for that together.

I've also created clarity on how you'd like to work with us going forward: in line with your wishes, I'll arrange the connection to FX Live Trader, the Firmenkundenportal, and LoanPilot, so the topics of your day-to-day business are available to you directly, at any time. For specific queries, you can reach me and my team from Mittelstandsbank Direkt.

On the delivery delays you mentioned: as expected, these primarily concern the production of your outdoor play equipment – I'd recommend prioritising trade finance there.

For your capacity expansion together with the connection of your existing overdraft facility, that adds up to a total credit volume of around €2.5 million – straightforward, from a single source.

And since Educational Computer Games is now clearly your fastest-growing line, I'm assuming you'll want to scale back the board games business over the medium term – I've already factored that into my proposal.

As you can see: there was no need for lengthy back-and-forth. Do get in touch if you still have questions.
